Campus fire protection system said inadequate if needed

Fire hydrants antiquated, buildings unprotected

By CARROLL WILSON

Fire protection facilities inside older buildings and under the ground on the West Texas State University campus are dangerously inadequate, fire officials here agreed last week.

City Fire Marshall and Code Enforcement Officer Jerry Lehnick and Fire Chief Jack Jennings agreed the state of fire protection on the campus is woefully inadequate for the number and size of buildings at WTSU and that the lack of adequate facilities would severely hamper any city fire department efforts at fighting a blaze should one occur.

Singled out for harsh criticism by Jennings and Lehnick was an antiquated and virtually useless underground water system which appears to supply numerous white-and-pink fireplugs, but which in reality would not supply the water needed to fight even a small fire in a major campus building.

Also criticized roundly by the two officials is the lack of fire protection equipment and fire prevention information in older campus buildings — particularly the Education Building and the Old Administration Building, which are at the center of the campus.

Jennings said for years the Canyon Volunteer Fire Department has known that it cannot trust the white fireplugs located in profusion around the campus and practice sessions on the campus call for bringing water to fight simulated blazes from fireplugs from the city's main water lines. Those fireplugs are located in most cases more than 1000 feet from any major campus building.

All white-and-pink fireplugs on the campus, sayd Lehnick and Jennings and City Water Superintendent Robert Rogers, go through a watermeter which cuts the pressure available to a virtually useless point.

And, they point out, if firemen are called to a fire on the campus, they can use only one of the university's white plugs because a Canyon pumper truck would suck through that plug all the water available to the campus.

Rogers, Lehnick and Jennings cited specific major problem areas in the university-owned fireplug system. Water for the fire plugs comes off city main lines but goes through a meter and also is used to water flowers and grass during summertimes and for sewage disposal year-round.

A tour of the campus reveals that the city-owned fire plug nearest the Student Union Building, old fieldhouse, Education Building and Old Administration Building, is a green and red plug located just northwest of the Student Union Building. The plug is rated as a good plug, one which will supply between 1000 and 2000 gallons per minute.

Another city main fire plug, this one also rated as capable of producing 1000 to 2000 gallons per minute, is located just east of the SUB.

But, the effectiveness of that plug is severely reduced, Lehnick says, because university workmen have poured concrete around it, making useless the large hose attachment.

While white-and-pink plugs dot the landscape around the older buildings on campus, Jennings, Rogers and Lehnick point out they are not useful for fire fighting.

Rogers pointed out that many of the hydrants on the university system simply do not work. The best of the others can supply less than 1000 gallons of water per minute, a production capacity which the three fire officials believe is inadequate for any fire.

Canyon Fire Department equipment, which includes a large snorkel unit purchased primarily to fight fires at the university, is designed to take water from hydrants which produce no less than 1000 gallons per minute, Jennings said.

Because the white-and-pink fire plugs on campus cannot be used by the fire department, he said, fire fighting plans now call for the local volunteer firemen to run their hoses to city-owned plugs off campus.

For the vast majority of buildings on the campus, that means that hose must be run more than 1000 feet to hook into a city plug.

"Any time you lay (a line) over 500 feet you're taking a chance on friction loss and pressure," Jennings said.

The fact is, he said, that by the time water reaches a burning building from a hydrant more than 1000 feet away there will not be enough water pressure to adequately cover the fire.

In addition, the time involved in laying lines to far-distant fire hydrants poses a serious problem, he said.

Jennings, Lehnick and Rogers agree that the university's system of fire hydrants should be replaced with a system which is unmetered. They propose construction of an underground water line grid consisting of eight-inch main lines coming directly from city mains. The grid would be used only for the fire hydrants and thus adequate pressure and water supply could be ensured.

John Boone, director of maintenance for the university, said university officials have discussed the possibility of such a system but have taken no action on trying to obtain funding for such a project.

The university has applied for $320,000 for a new underground utility tunnell for a portion of the campus. The Legislative Budget Board has recommended the funding and now House and Senate are considering the appropriation.

Boone said the establishment of a system to upgrade the fire hydrant facilities on campus is not included in that appropriation request. In fact, he said, plans have not yet been started for such a system.

The inadequacy of the university's underground water supply system for fighting fires is not the only area of concern for Lehnick.

A quick look at the campus's older buildings revealed these shortcomings:

*One fire hose system installed in the Education Building and tied into the university water system has a lock on its door. Even if the door could be opened, there is no hose on the small spigot. This fire extinguisher is located about 10 steps from a professor's office. The office burned during a small fire in the building last month.

*None of the several similar fire water systems in the Old Administration Building have hose.

*One side of each double door leading into or from both the Education Building and the Old Administration Building is locked. Lehnick said this is an unsafe fire prevention practice.

*The back door of the university library is permanently locked. Again, Lehnick points out that in case of fire, the only exit available from the library would be through the front doors of the building.

*Only one city fire plug, and no university fire hydrants, are available to fight fires at the massive WTSU Activities Center on the east corner of the campus. But, university officials have erected a chain link fence, fencing out the plug, which would make it difficult for firemen to bring hoses to close proximity of the building. Fire Chief Jennings said he has instructed his firemen to use a firetruck to tear down the fence in case the activities center is burning.

*The relatively new University Complex South at the center of the campus has an integral fire escape system consisting of a smoke-proof stairwell to provide emergency exit from the building should it burn. However, university officials have not put out or posted information concerning the existence of the emergency fire stairwell system, to which access can be gained through four corner classrooms only.

Fire danger in the Old Administration Building has been of concern to faculty members who office in that building for several years.

About two years ago, Dr. Travis McBride, head of the political science department, Dr. Duane Guy, head of the history department, and Dr. Hubert Oppe, head of the sociology department, called on administrators to correct what they considered serious flaws in the building, flaws which inhibited fire protection.

They have yet to hear from the administration on their problem, according to Dr. McBride.

Of chief concern to the faculty in the building has been a multi-classroom cluster constructed on the second and third floors of the building when the structure was remodeled several years ago. Faculty members contend that the wood construction of the classrooms makes them particularly vulnerable to fire, especially since in the basement of the building is located elaborate electrical wiring for the university telephone exchange. They have also contended that emergency escape from the classrooms would follow only one route and that emergency exits should be provided on the north portion of the building.

Local fire officials note that the inadequacy of the fire protection facilities at the university are the university's affair and problem.

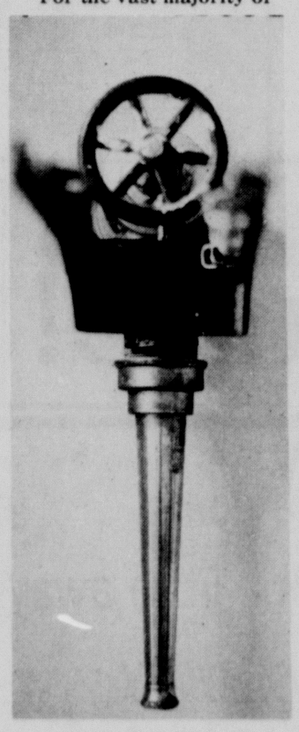

"It definitely needs to be corrected," Jennings said, "but it's the university's worry. We've taken measures to see that we have adequate city equipment and water supply and there are no problems in the city program."

Lehnick, who as fire marshall and code enforcement officer is required to enforce regulations concerning fire protection on structures built within the city, sayd he has absolutely no power to inspect or to enforce city rules on state-owned property.

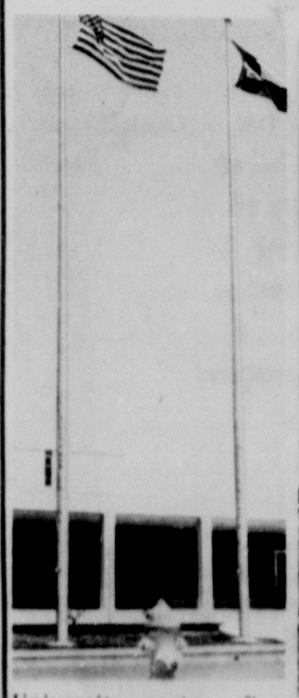

"They'll bring me a set of plans here and get my signature saying they meet our requirements but they can build it any way they want to," he said of the university officials. "That's not to say they are, but they can do anything. This is a problem statewide, but when you have 6000 students there you should be assured of some protection."

Fire Capt. Roe Rice has talked with university officials about implementation of the kind of Housing permits again on the rise

After months of slow growth relating directly to the state of the national economy, residential home building is again booming in Canyon.

April is the biggest month this year — both in dollar amount and number of new home starts — in building permits issued for construction.

Building permit figures indicate 10 new residents went under construction during April, to overshadow every month since the year began and most the the latter months of 1974.

Building permits for the month totalled $268,000, well above previous months this year and above similar months in years since 1972.

Figures prepared by City Code Enforcement Officer Jerry Lehnick indicate the new home construction is taking place in every major development area of Canyon. Four of the homes begun in April are going up in the Hunsley Hills subdivision while three are under construction in the Davis-Hooper Addition. Two homes were begun during April in Pioneer Estates and one in Hidden Valley.

New home starts accounted for $221,500 of the building permit total for the month.

The April 1975 figures compare favorably with previous April in years past. In 1974, building permits totalled $251,550 for April. The permit total in April 1973 was $247,050, and in 1972 the total was $221,679.

Lehnick said the big difference in the new housing starts now underway in Canyon is the price listed for the homes. Average price for the houses begun during April here was $22,100. Six of the homes for which permits were issued during the month were listed on the permit rolls at prices ranging from $17,000 to $17,500. One house begun in April carried a dollar price of $21,000 and three were in the $30,000 to $32,000 price range.

So far this year, building permit totals are lagging behind the totals for the same period in 1974. The 1975 total through April is $651,384 while the 1974 total through April was $1,110,717. However, the 1974 figures include a $400,000 permit issued for construction of the now-completed University Church of Christ.

March 1975 was also indicative of the up-turn in housing starts in the city with eight residents issued permits for a total of $176,500. Permits for the month totalled $235,284. Again, the houses for which construction began in March were in the $17,500 to $20,000 price range on the permit sheets.

January and February this year were light months for the housing construction businesses. Only two residents went under construction during February and permits for the month totalled only $58,600. Traditionally, though, February

Sherrod supports rape reform

Randall County's district attorney said last week he favors Senate passage of a rape reform bill which proponents say would focus courtroom attention on the defendant rather than the victim.

However, a West Texas State University graduate assistant who has actively campaigned for rape law reform, says the bill passed by the House at mid-week is only a first and tentative step toward true reform.

Dist. Atty. Randall Sherrod said he believes the legislation passed by the House and sent to the Senate last week would make good law.

Mrs. Claudia Stravato, graduate assistant in the department of political science at WTSU, says it's simply not enough.

The legislation contains two specific clauses which would change the current proceedings in rape trials in Texas.

Currently, under loosely identified circumstances, the defense can go into the background of an alleged rape victim to the fullest extent.

The new law, if it passes, would state that "evidence of specific instances of the victim's sexual conduct, opinion evidence of the victim's sexual conduct, and reputation evidence of the victim's sexual conduct may be admitted . . . only if, and only to the extent that, the judge finds that the evidence is material to a fact at issue in the case and that its inflammatory or prejudicial nature does not outweigh its probative value."

The bill would also provide a closed chamber hearing before the judge to "determine whether the proposed evidence is admissable under this section . . . The defendant shall not go outside these limits nor refer to any evidence ruled inadmissable in camera without prior approval of the court without the presence of the jury."

"I think this is real good," Sherrod said. "I don't think you should be able to go into the background of the woman unless the judge finds it relevant to the truth or not."

Sherrod admitted that under current law "in a lot of cases it appears they end up trying the girl — you get a bit off the defendant and into the girl."

While Sherrod said he would favor controls on that portion of the rape trial, he would be cautious about another proposed

WTSU dean says

Both research, teaching important to college

Research is just as important as teaching at a university and should be rewarded through some system on a basis equal to the rewards offered for teaching excellence, the dean of the West Texas State University graduate school said Thursday night.

Such is not the case, however, at WTSU, Dr. David Wheeler told a small audience at the final interdepartmental seminar at the Episcopal Student Center.

"My point is simple," Wheeler said. "We have people on the faculty with unusually creative minds turned well in research. The system lets those minds atrophy. They are not rewarded much, they are not supported much.

"If we assume a university is to be a place of excellence but the assumption is that you must devote 60 per cent of your time to teaching to be a good teacher, something is dreadfully wrong," he said.

Apparently criticizing a recently unveiled WTSU standard for consideration of faculty excellence for promotions, merit raises and tenure, Wheeler indicated research efforts will be stymied when a faculty member is rated more on the basis of his classroom performance than on his professional research and publication efforts.

The system, which apparently mandates faculty evaluations at the university based on a formula which places the weight of the evaluation on teaching, Wheeler said, should actually give equal weight to classroom and research efforts of the faculty member.

"I do not advocate a diminution of teaching," he said. "A non-teaching university is a contradiction in terms. I do advocate a reward system which recognizes faculty who have a talent for research and publication on a basis commensurate with that of faculty who have a talent for teaching. The greatest rewards should be given to those who have a talent for both teaching and research."

Fed cattle numbers down here

Randall County ranked fifth in 1974 in the number of cattle fed in area feedlots among Texas counties listed in the recently published 1975 Fed Cattle Report prepared by Southwestern Public Service Co.

The report lists fed cattle numbers for 27 Texas Panhandle counties.

According to the report, feedyards in Randall County fed 180,000 head of cattle during 1974. The report says that feedlot capacity in 1975 is 132,000 head.

Deaf Smith County ranked first in the number of fed cattle last year with 503,000, followed by Parmer County with 424,800, Castro County with 347,100, Swisher County with 196,000 and Randall County with 180,-

City rancher named to state-wide honor

An Armstrong County rancher who lives in Canyon has been named the Conservation Rancher for the state of Texas.

Ed Harrell and his family of 1707 Creekmere were in Fort Worth Friday where Harrell received the award from the Fort Worth Area Chamber of Commerce, sponsoring group of the conservation awards.

Harrell was nominated for the honor by the Staked Plains Soil and Water Conservation District, which operates in Armstrong County.

Jim Guess, soil conservationist with the Soil Conservation Service in Claude, said Harrell was named Armstrong County's Conservation Rancher earlier this year as commendation for the conservation efforts he's made on his 34,000 acres of grazing land in the southwest part of that county.

While Harrell has participated in the Great Plains Conservation Program, much of the conservation work for which he was cited has been accomplished since about 1970, Guess said, and most of the work has been at his own expense.

Harrell participated in the Great Plains program in the late 1960s, but it was a drought which hit the area in 1970 which spurred his efforts at other conservation measures.

Since that time, Guess said, Harrell has installed hundreds of feet of pipeline to take water to re-

Mrs. Bruse to Austin as bill passes House

Randall County's tax collector, discouraged by a House okay given last week to legislation which would make her office the appraisal center here, will travel to Austin today to outline for State Sen. Max Sherman her objections to the bill.

Mrs. Audrey Bruse said she will be in Austin for a state-sponsored Texas tax assessors conference and will meet with Sherman in an effort to enlist his support for a revamping of the proosed legislation.

She said, however, she believes the legislation will pass Senate approval also.

The bill, known in the House as H.B. 1463 or the Peveto Bill, was attacked roundly by Mrs. Bruse during commissioners court last Monday as she charged it would take away local control over taxing and place that control at the state level.

The bill would establish the county as the appraisal center for all taxing jurisdictions within the county.

While her initial efforts were aimed at defeat of the legislation in the House, she indicated she will probably concentrate this week-end on simply revising the bill to lessen the control she believes state officials will have under the current version.

"Right now," she admitted, "I'm a little discouraged."

Mrs. Bruse had written to Speaker of the House Bill Clayton last Monday, with the blessing of county commissioners, urging defeat of the bill.

She says she retains her objections, those voiced last week.

"It was the consensus of opinion of the Randall County commissioners court, County Judge, and myself that this bill is placing the responsibility for property tax administration with the state and removing it from local control," she wrote. "We feel this is not in the best interest of the taxpayers."

While she said she would agree that all property within one county should have one valuation in all tax offices "there should be a better approach than H.B. 1463."

Noting that the legislation establishes a state director under the state comptroller, Mrs. Bruse says this will lead to a reduction of power at the county level.

The bill also establishes a local advisory council to oversee the operations of the office, but she

Apt. owners cooperate on housing

More than a dozen apartment house owners agreed Thursday night to cooperate with the Canyon Chamber of Commerce in providing up-to-date housing availability information for students at West Texas State University.

And, Chamber President Weldon Trice called on all other apartment house owners and owners of rental property here to cooperate also in the effort to provide a centralized housing information office in the city.

Trice and Chamber Manager Roland Black met with 16 apartment house owners Thursday on the university campus to lay plans for a coordinated effort to disseminate information on the availability of apartments for university students and others interested in living in Canyon.

Trice said Black will begin

Our World

Loss Of War Cause Of Shame

By ANN BROWN

The tragic fall of South Vietnam has increased the number of people who declare they are ashamed of being Americans.

There is a big difference, however, between being ashamed of America, and disapproving of the policies promoted by the people in control of our government.

Many of us were shocked, ashamed — and scared when Roosevelt put us in bed with the Russians during World War II.

We were certain that "going down to Egypt" for help could only end in disaster.

There were so few of that persuasion, however, that voicing one's convictions accomplished little more than alienating friends.

Now Americans are asking "Where did we go wrong? Was it in China? Was it in Korea? Was it Cuba? Was it Vietnam?"

We had been on the wrong road so long by the time we sold out Chiang Kai-shek, and MacArthur dared try to win the war in Korea, our enemies no longer feared us.

On April 2, Tran Kim Phuong, the South Vietnamese Ambassador to the U.S., said in an interview on CBS Morning News: "I think the people around the world can draw only one possible conclusion: It is perhaps safe to be an ally of the communists, and probably fatal to be an ally of the United States."

The tragic American policy that caused us to allow Russia to walk off with the spoils after W.W. II, while we picked up the tab, paved the way for the no-win wars in Korea and Vietnam.

Any time a war is not won it is lost.

The results of our losing a war have had a demoralizing effect on all freedom-loving peoples everywhere.

Our deliberate refusal to help the people of Cambodia, and our willful abandonment of the South Vietnamese is getting the publicity, but what about the European nations we dumped into the communist maw? Then there's China, Korea, and Cuba.

The people in those countries love freedom as much as the Cambodians and Vietnamese.

When our boys entered W.W. II, the rallying cry was, "Make the world safe for democracy."

The boys did a tremendous job, and America was never stronger or more highly respected than at the close of W.W. II.

Then our President gave our victory to Russia. And the reins we so definitely held he handed over to the United Nations.

Did the more than 400,000 Americans who died in W.W. II, the 33,000+ who died in Korea, and the 56,000 who fell in Vietnam give up their lives to make the world safe for communism?

Will Taiwan, Thailand, South Korea, and the Philippines be next?

Is our policy of refusing to win wars, claim our victories, and degrade patriotism a contributing factor to our growing crime rate, drug culture, alcoholism, divorce rate, and mental illness?

For any people to be emotionally healthy they must have pride, self respect, and hope for the future.

No one can deny our selfish, foolish, wicked politicians have disgraced America.

But before you decide you are ashamed to be an American, why not find out how many people are trying to get out of America, and seek refuge in some communist country?

After you compare the number and quality of the few people leaving America with the number and quality of the millions trying to come in, you may decide to join the "reactionaires" who have been trying to save our country from the politicians for the last 40 years.

Ultimate In Movies

By CARROLL WILSON

First it was 3-D and then it was Smello-vision.

Now, motion picture producers are back into that faddish groove trying to add extra sensory impressions to their movies. Films like "Earthquake," where the filmgoer is vibrated as he sits in the moviehouse, are again becoming the fad. And what with "Earthquake" winning an Oscar for its special effects, we can probably expect more in the same genre.

A friend of mine in Hollywood tells me that if you thought "Earthquake" appealed to your senses, you should hold onto your theatre seat for what's coming next.

He referred me to that famous California screen producer Rele Isum, a fellow we've all heard about since his touted effort to spray unsuspecting audiences who came to watch John Wayne in True Grit with true grit.

Isum unsuccessfully worked up a truly marvelous mechanical gismo for another Oscar winner — the "Exorcist." He wanted to dump green pea soup on the audience from specially-constructed overhead containers at one particularly stimulating scene in the movie.

Isum announced over the phone when I talked with him the other day that he's perfected the ultimate in movie sensation. It'll make "Earthquake's" quaking seats look like child's play.

At Isum's invitation I jetted to Hollywood to be on hand for the premier showing of his new flick — "The Quaking Inferno."

The marquee outside the theatre was theatrically provocative with such turgid screamers as "This Movie Will Have You On Your Feet!", and "A New Dimension In Sensurround!", and "If You Can't Stand The Sight of Blood Skip This Film."

Naturally, there was a line around the block to try to get into the theatre, but since I was with Isum, we got good seats at the very back of the darkened moviehouse.

I'm not going to bother explaining the story line. That's not what's important, after all, in a movie that's supposed to surround you with realistic sensory perceptions.

But, a curious thing happened about midway through the film. Isum began tugging at my sleeve.

"Why don't we watch the rest of the movie from outside," he said jovially, gesturing with a long cigar. Slowly, we walked down the aisle and out the door and Isum led me to a spot across the street from the theatre.

"Now," he said, "I think we can get the full effect from here."

Frankly, I thought Isum had flipped.

Suddenly the first of three major explosions rocked the very ground we were standing on. Across the street, I saw bricks tumble from the theatre and fire began licking at the roof from slit windows on the side.

Screams and shrieks came from inside.

"Wow," I said. "That's a really great effect. I thought for a minute there the theatre was exploding and burning."

"You really like it" he asked imploringly. "It's awfully expensive and we want it to get good box office."

"How did you do it" I asked.

"Just three sticks of dynamite under the stage," he said. "Really, it's a very simple technique, but extremely realistic, don't you think."

"Never seen anything like it," I said. "If I didn't know better, I'd say this was actually happening."

"Well," Isum continued. "It actually is happening, you know. But, we wanted to give the people their money's worth. You don't think it's tasteless, do you"

"Why, of course not," I said comforting him. "Besides, who in the world can tell you what public taste is, anyway? Why I'm still waiting for the Supreme Court to tell me what's obscene."

Fire trucks arrived on the scene, and ambulances, too. And, hundreds of people ran from the theatre, their clothes aflame.

"Do you think there's too much violence" Isum asked objectively.

"Can you get too much violence?" I asked rhetorically. "Seems to me that what with all this excitement, you've got yourself a real million-dollar movie."

"I hope so," Isum said. "I've got bigger plans for my next one."

"I can't wait," I said.

"Yes," he said, "It's going to be called 'The Day The World Ended.' "

Soil Stewardship Week Begins Today

Today begins Soil Stewardship Week, which is sponsored by the Palo Duro Soil And Water Conservation District. The theme for the week is "Test of Strength."

According to Bill Casteel, the purpose of the observance is to emphasize man's dependance on the world in which he lives. He must have supporting services, protection, jobs, food, clothing and all of life's amenities. His real strength lies in his depth of integrity, concern, commitment and involvement in making a better world and his realization that "my help cometh from the Lord."

At a breakfast for pastors of churches in Canyon and others who are working for soil and water conservation in Randall County at the Presbyterian Church on April 14, Bob McCasland introduced the Soil Stewardship Program.

The program included a slide presentation by Bill Casteel. The relation of soil to the food and fiber items found in supermarkets were shown. Also conservation work in Randall County was seen.

The district has furnished ten local churches with bulletins, inserts and brochures for use on one of the Sundays during the observance week.

Commission Approves Certificates

Randall County commissioners met briefly Friday afternoon in special session to authorize issuance of $58,000 in certificates of obligation to pay for April construction costs on their new South Amarillo courthouse annex.

Financial Advisor Bob Davis of Columbian Securities presented the certificates for signature.

In other business, Commissioner Jim Fletcher agreed to travel to Washington May 12 along with other representatives from the Panhandle to confer with federal officials concerning redesignation of U.S. 60 as a part of the interstate highway system.

Commissioners will not meet Monday in regular scheduled session. They will be guests of Caterpillar Tractor on a tour of the firm's plant in Peoria, Ill.

School Out Early Wed.

The final early dismissal day for Canyon Public School students will be held Wednesday, May 7, as students are released from the classrooms at 2:30 p.m.

Teachers will continue to work following early dismissal as they discuss budget and make departmental plans.

After Wednesday, students will continue classes uninterrupted until May 30 when students are dismissed for the summer vacation. The last day of school for teachers will be a workday on May 31.

Summer school registration will be conducted on June 2 and further details on subjects available will be released shortly.

Going somewhere? Or been? The Canyon News wants to know about it — and so do its readers.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor,

What does one do when he sees police officers violate traffic rules, stop and remind them what they just did or ignore it?

Tuesday, April 29th, a city patrol car passed two vehicles — one with a stock trailer attached — going south on 15th Street at 1st Avenue over the railroad tracks. He could not possibly see any on coming traffic because of the hill.

No emergency lights and siren were on.

City Commission To Hear Second TV Cable Proposal

Two West Texas State University vice presidents will present their plan for operation of a cable television service for Canyon residents during the regular city commission meeting scheduled Monday night.

Dr. T. Paige Carruth, vice president for student affairs, and Hermas Miller, vice president for financial affairs, will make a formal proposal for a franchise to operate a cable television firm in the city.

However, no information is available on what their franchise will include.

While commissioners are expected to hear the proposal Monday night, if they follow the advice of City Manager Glen Metcalf, no decision will be made for some time yet.

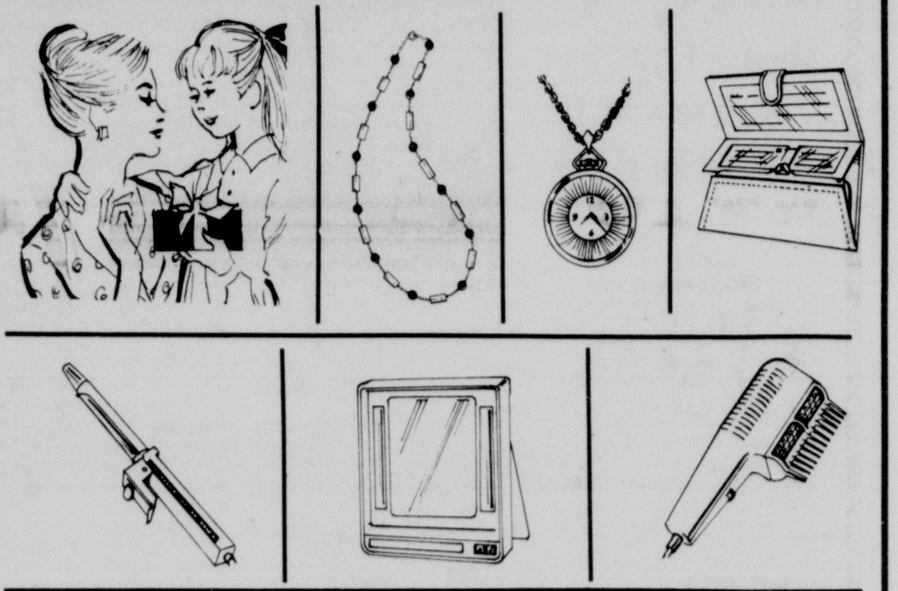

Metcalf is expected to recommend that no franchise be awarded until the Carruth-Miller proposal and one presented separately by T.D. Austin of Amrillo have been thoroughly reviewed. Austin has already proposed a formal franchise agreement for operation of a cable TV service. He met with commissioners in April to go over this proposal.

Fire. . .

grid water supply system which would provide adequate water to campus buildings, but Jennings and Lehnick say their hands are tied in any but an advisory capacity.

Unfortunately, though, while city officials cannot inspect buildings for adequate fire protection measures, and while they cannot force university officials to install adequate water supply systems, Canyon residents themselves will suffer if a major fire ever breaks out in a large campus building.

Lehnick said the city's fire rating for insurance purposes includes the fires which might occur on the campus. With millions of dollars in structures, he said, one fire could raise fire insurance rates here for years.

"If one of those things burns down and you lose millions of dollars, that's added on (the citizens' fire rating), and yet that's on state property," Lehnick said. "Why should we pay for the state's mistakes?"

Lehnick said it would be "a headache" for him to have to inspect structures on the campus, but he said there are alternative approaches.

He said he feels it would not be adequate for the university simply to provide an inspector from among its own employees, because his objectivity could be expected to be less than that of someone operating independently of the university.

It might be feasible, he said, for the university to agree to allow him to inspect new and old buildings for fire protection purposes, but such a system would work only if the university showed good faith in carrying through on his suggestions.

City fireplug of adequate strength . . . reduced in capability because university made large hose connection unusable by pouring concrete around it.

Rape. . .

change in the current law which is embraced in the legislation.

Under the proposal which passed the House, the victim would have a six-month time limit within which to inform any other person she had been assaulted.

Practically speaking, Sherrod said, if a victim does not report such an assault to authorities almost immediately after it occurs, she substantially reduces the chances for conviction.

Mrs. Stravato, charging that rape cases are usually trials for the women victims rather than trials for alleged defendants, said the bill passed Wednesday was not exactly what she and other proponents of rape law reform around the state had wanted.

"We wanted to totally keep out (during trial) the prior sexual activity of the woman," she said. She said, however, that probing into a victim's sexual activity when that activity is pertinent to the facts at hand and when the sexual activity is alleged to have taken place within a reasonable time frame close to the alleged assault is justified.

"This is a step toward a more civilized treatment for women in rape trials," she said.

Pointing to a headline rape trial in Amarillo last week, Mrs. Stravato contends that the defendant "was not on trial there," but the victim was.

Defense counsel, she said, probed the victim's sex life during the past 15 years.

"If the extraneous information about the girl's past life is not relevant to the case it should be totally kept out," she said. "On the other hand, if the man's past activities are relevant to the case, they should be allowed in."

Mrs. Stravato said she expects the legislation to pass the Senate, although it met "unprecedented opposition" in the House.

She said the original bill introduced in the House was much more powerful in protecting the rights of the woman, but that it was watered down by the House, which she says is full of male lawyer-legislators.

"We'll accept this watered down bill because it's all we're going to get," she said. "Change will only come through attitudinal changes in the general public."

Mrs. Stravato, who is an active member of both the High Plains Women's Political Caucus and the Amarillo League of Women Voters, said she expects future programs from both groups to focus on changing those societal attitudes toward the victim of rape.

Owners. . .

work this week on construction of a large chart with listings of each apartment house and each piece of rental property and the status of availability of each. The information will be compiled and kept at the chamber office and will be available to anyone.

Trice said the apartment owners agreed to work with Black each week by providing updated information on the number of units available for rent. Prices for rental property will not be listed.

The chamber president said other apartment owners or owners of any type rental property should contact Black this week so their property can be listed. He asked, also, that owners should frequently contact Black to upate the information on availability of rental property.

The university currently refers students seeking off-campus housing to the chamber office for information on availability of housing.

Trice said the apartment owners also discussed the prices charged in Canyon for apartments and other rental property and concluded that prices here are lower than prices for similar units in Amarillo.

"They think the prices are very much in line," he said. Prices mentioned during the meeting, he said, seemed to range from a low of $75 per month for a one-bedroom unit to $125 per month for a one-bedroom unit.

The Thursday night session was called by Trice after he met with disgruntled students two weeks ago. The students complained that information on available housing was not readily to be found here and that prices for housing were not competitive.

Research. . .

Research for a graduate school or an institution which offers graduate education is an essential in the acquisition of knowledge and in the teaching process itself, Wheeler said.

"In theory an ideal learning process would be to so establish the strategy of education that the student would rediscover and recreate the whole of his discipline," Wheeler said. "It should be our mutual concern that the research experience of our graduate students achieves this. The non-thesis option which some of our departments have rushed to embrace deprives both students and faculty of an essential learning experience."

Likewise, Wheeler said, graduate courses at the university should be so taight that the student is involved in discovery.

"Research is an essential activity of a faculty that supervises the research activities of students in graduate courses," he said. "Teaching and research are one at the graduate level. Thus what the student learns is not the opposite from research; it is research.

"Is it possible to discern where teaching leaves off and research begins," he asked. "Perhaps but only at the frontier where the learning process passes from what others have already learned to what no one has yet learned. When student and teacher venture beyond that frontier, the distinction between teaching and research has lost all meaning. Student and teacher are colleagues learning together. A student has to be led up to the frontier separating what is known from what is unknown. The only kind of teacher who can be trusted to lead students to the frontier is a person who has spent many hours there probing the unknown."

Wheeler said research, in fact, is the primary activity which keeps the content of education current, pertinent and challenging to students.

"The novelty, the excitement, and the vitality of superb teaching are not possible unless the teacher is also a researcher," he said. "Cultural stagnation would set in quickly if one generation must add to the learning it has received; research is the means to that addition."

Wheeler built a case that it is not necessarily true that those faculty members who do not research and publish are, because of this, good teachers. Although there are exceptions, he said, the teachers who are most able to contribute to knowledge are, as a whole, those from whom students can learn the most.

Research today becomes the material for teaching tomorrow and the teacher who hopes to "profess" meaningfully, must also learn. He learns through research, Wheeler said.

"We have heard often that a person may be a good researcher but a bad teacher," he said. "I should like to suggest, however, that one may not be a good teacher unless he is also a competent and willing researcher. Teaching and research may be incompatible in the researcher; they are complementary in the teacher."

The most usual mode of communication for the teacher who researches is through publication in regional or national journals, Wheeler said. And, he said, there are no grounds for faculty arguments that there is not enough time for research and for subsequent writing for publication.

The report notes the recent drop in both the number of cattle fed in the Panhandle and the feedlot capacity here.

Fed cattle production in the company's service area dropped to 4,082,142 in 1974 from a high of 4,962,763 in 1973. One-time feedlot capacity also dropped during 1974 from a 1973 high of 2,742,250 to 2,672,869.

The number of feedlots in the region with a capacity of 1000 head and above dropped from 177 in 1973 to 171 in 1974 and to 150 as 1975 opened.

In Randall County, major shifts have taken place during the past year in the larger cattle feeding operations.

Randall County Feedyard north of Canyon, with a capacity of 75,000 head, was sold by Mesa Petroleum last fall to a Dallas businessman who began operations near the end of the year with only 10,000 head.

Happy Wheat Growers Feedlot north of Happy ceased operations altogether in May 1974 and the 25,000-head capacity lot went without cattle throughout the remainder of that year. The feedyard facility was sold, however, last month to an Eagle Pass businessman and rancher who says he will begin operations anew this month.

Mrs. Bruse said State Rep. Bob Simpson of Amarillo told her he voted to pass the bill.

Permits. . .

is a light new construction month.

January saw starts on three new homes here for a total of $60,500. Permits for the month totalled $88,900.

Lehnick said the upsurge in new home starts here indicates builders feel the economy is beginning to loosen up a bit after more than a year of recessionary fears, high interest rates and tight money.

He anticipates that the housing boom will continue this year and that by the close of 1975, as many new homes will have been started as were started during 1974. He expects, however, that the dollar amounts for each house — and therefore the dollar amounts for total permits — will be down for the year. That, he said, is because most houses that went under construction during 1974 carried permit sheet prices in the $40,000 range.

Miss McCampbell-Barnes Pledge Rites

Mrs. Richard Alan Barnes
nee Nina Lois McCampbell

Miss Nina Lois McCampbell and Richard Alan Barnes exchanged double ring marriage vows Saturday, May 3, at Polk Street Methodist Church in Amarillo.

Dr. J. Walter Browers officiated at the rites in the sanctuary as matching bouquets of white carnations with gladioli and greenery accented the setting. White satin aisle bows completed the decorations.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chester G. McCampbell of 714 W. Storey in Midland and Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Barnes of 4107 Drummond in Houston are parents of the bridegroom.

Iris McCampbell served as the maid of honor and Lanetta McCampbell was bridesmaid. Both bridal attendants wore full length dresses of lined sheer mist in a green flowered voil. The dresses were fashioned with V-front design and made by the bride featuring long Bishop sleeves, full skirts and accenting white lace. Each carried a bouquet of pink carnations, baby's breath and greenery tied with green ribbon to match their dresses.

Frank Barnes, brother of the bridegroom from Houston, served as best man and Bill Teinert of San Antonio, a brother-in-law of the bridegroom, was groomsman for the occasion.

Ushering were Ken Day and Jack Owen, both of Amarillo, and Dennis McCampbell of Midland.

Escorted and presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length wedding gown of miramist and Chantilly lace fashioned with a high neckline and bishop sleeves forming petal points above the wrists. The waistline formed a "v" design and the full skirt cascaded in a waterfall fashion beneath her full length wedding veil which extended to form the wedding train with chantilly lace edging. The veil was held to a coif of chantilly lace, seed pearls and sequins and the bride carried a bouquet of white carnations, baby's breath and greenery.

A reception for the couple was held in the church parlor immediately afterward with Tammy Barnett of Canyon registering the guests. Serving were Susan Crouch of Odessa, Kathy Hollis of Dimmitt, Toni Griffin of Amarillo, Juanita Porter of Midland, Irene Baggerman of Amarillo, Traci Barnett of Canyon Teresa Desper and Peggy Abbott both of Amarillo.

The bride wore a yellow travel suit as the couple departed on a two week trip to Nassau in the Bahamas. They also planned to see Freeport and return by way of Orlando, Florida to visit Disney World before establishing their home at 7979 Westheimer #2816 in Houston, Texas.

The bride was formerly employed with the First National Bank of Amarillo and is a 1974 graduate of West Texas State University where she was a member of the Society for the Advancement of Management and an officer of the WTSU Marketing Club.

A 1970 graduate of Texas A&M, the bridegroom is co-owner of the National Service Center in Houston and a commercial pilot.

Mrs. Kerry Sherman Morgan
nee Patricia Louise Burrus

Miss Burrus-Morgan Marry At Calvary Baptist Church

Calvary Baptist Church was the setting for the May 2 double ring marriage ceremony which united Miss Patricia Louise Burrus and Kerry Sherman Morgan in marriage.

Rev. Derrel Lewis, pastor, officiated at the exchange of marriage vows which united the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tony T. Burrus, northeast of Canyon, with the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sherman Morgan of Amarillo.

Pink candles and a large spring bouquet decorated the altar for the occasion as Martha Burrus, sister-in-law of the bride, presented appropriate piano and organ selections. The bride's brother, Tony Dale Burrus, and Clifford Stewart presented vocal presentations of the Wedding Song, the wedding march from Sound of Music and Twelfth of Never with guitar accompaniment by the bride's brother.

Attending the couple were Tawna Burrus and Bobby Burrus, niece and nephew of the bride, who served as flowergirl and flowerbearer. Todd Burrus of Shreveport, Louisiana the bride's nephew, served as ringbearer and Sabrina Burrus, a niece of the bride from Childress, attended the guest book.

Mrs. Sam Calliham of Canyon served as matron of honor and Greg Hulsey was best man. Ushering were Craig Henderson, David Townsend and Kenneth Friemel, all of Canyon.

Escorted and presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length wedding gown of angelmist peau de soie and re-embroidered Chantilly lace over bridal taffeta designed with a high neckline, empire waist, long camelot sleeves and a semi A-line silhouette with full back interest. Inserts of lace enhanced the neckline, bodice, sleeves and skirt of the wedding gown. The hemline of the wedding gown featured a ruffle of tiny pleats complemented with wide ribbon and bows and the full back of the skirt ended in a sweeping chapel length wedding train. Her veil of imported illusion was held to a coif and she carried a bouquet of spring flowers and an heirloom lace handkerchief belonging to her grandmother, deceased.

Friends and relatives attended the wedding dance which followed the marriage ceremony as music was provided by the bride's brother, Tony Burrus. The bridegroom is a member of the dance band also.

The couple departed the reception dance for a wedding trip to Austin and Galveston and will be residing in Amarillo on return. For travel, the bride chose a light blue pantsuit with white shell featuring light blue designs.

Out-of-town guests seated for the bride's family included Mr. and Mrs. Jack Burrus and family of Childress, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Burrus and family of Center, Tex. and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Burrus of Shreveport, Louisiana. Attending from out-of-town and seated with the groom's family were Rose Mixon of Florida, a grandmother, and aunts, Thelma Weekley of West Virginia, Jo Hyson and Willa Mae Gaines, both of Florida.

The bride, a graduate of Canyon High School attended West Texas State University for three years and is presently employed at Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo.

A graduate of Caprock High School, Amarillo, the bridegroom attended West Texas State University where he was a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity. He is presently employed with Cox and Bryan and is a member of the band, "Young Country."

D. Crow Visits Bluebonnet Country

D. Crow of Canyon, as renowned Texas bluebonnet artist, has just returned from a tour of the Bluebonnet Trails in Texas.

Mrs. Crow was a guest of the Senator's and Representative's Wives Club for a luncheon at the Onion Creek Country Club which included a style show by Frosts of San Antonio and Austin. Among the guests for the occasion were Mrs. Lucy (Johnson) Nugent, daughter of the late President Lyndon Baines Johnson; Mrs. Dolph Briscoe, the Texas Governor's wife, and their daughter, Mrs. Vaughn.

The luncheon and style show were followed with a tour of the Bluebonnet trails including tours at the L.B.J. Ranch and State Park and throughout the surrounding Highland Lakes.

"The whole countryside was a blanket of bluebonnets and Indian paintbrush," relates Mrs. Crow. "The rainbow-hued specimen combined with scores of other varieties to create one of the most spectacular displays of wild flowers that have been seen in several years."

"The most breathtaking of all was the Texas Bluebonnets, our state flower, which splashed across the hills, roadsides and streambanks outshining the color of the other wildflowers with its own velvet blue," she concluded.

The North Austin Bank featured a showing of D. Crow's original Bluebonnet paintings and while in Austin, Mrs. Crow was a houseguest of Mr. and Mrs. Claiborn Crain, formerly of Canyon.

Secretaries Honor "The Boss"

Dr. Hubert W. Oppe has received the distinct honor as "Boss of the Year" from the Tierra Blanca chapter of the National Secretaries Association, International.

An appropriate poster greeted Dr. Hubert Oppe, chairman of the university sociology department at West Texas State University, as he returned to work Monday after his selection last week as the "boss of the year" for Tierra Blanca chapter of the National Secretaries Association. He is shown with his secretary, Kelli McBride, who nominated him for the selection.

The recognition was announced at the "secretary-boss of the year" banquet held last Thursday evening, April 24, at the Hereford Country Club as a highlight of National Secretaries Week for the local chapter.

Dr. Oppe, head of the Department of Sociology and a sociology department professor at West Texas State University, was in Fort Worth at the time of the announcement. He was attending a national symposium to discuss "hunger in a growing world" and was the sponsor of six university students there.

He was nominated for the chapter's recognition by his secretary, Kelli McBride, herself a former chapter secretary-of-the-year.

Born in Bremen, Germany, Dr. Oppe immigrated to the United States in 1950 and became a U.S. citizen in 1954. He and his wife, Dorothy, have four children. In 1954 he earned the B.A. in sociology at San Diego State College in California and then the M.A. in 1957 from the University of California at Berkeley. He earned the Ph.D. in his field in 1968 from the University of California at Berkeley where his doctoral degree studies were aided by a Danforth Scholarship of $6,000 awarded for excellence in teaching. The scholarship was one of 50 such stipends awarded throughout the nation.

Prior to coming to West Texas State University, Dr. Oppe was an instructor for College of the Holy Names at Oakland, Calif. He joined the WT Sociology department as an assistant professor from 1963-66 and was an associate professor for the department from 1966-70 before becoming the department's chairman.

He has helped to develop the Social Work Education Program at West Texas State University and since 1972 has been instrumental in obtaining approximately $300,000 from HEW, which in turn has facilitated 50 students to obtain annual scholarships for attending the university.

Dr Oppe's early publication attempts resulted in the monograph publication of "Umbarger, Its History and People" in 1964; and a survey report of "Nursing Needs and Resources in the Amarillo Service Area" for Northwest Texas Hospital, Amarillo, in 1970.

Presently, Dr. Oppe has a book manuscript on "Processes of Change in Generation Sequences" in the process of publication. He has also written "Potter-Randall Counties Survey of Aged" 1965-67 which was published and research sponsored by the Potter-Randall County Citizens Committee. Other research reports prepared by Dr. Oppe have included an "Income Profile for Selected Areas of the Amarillo SMA" in 1972 for the City of Amarillo and OEO-CAP, and "A Wage Comparability Study with Proposed Classifications for Positions and Pay Schedules" prepared for the Texas Panhandle Community Action Corporation in Amarillo for December 1974.

In addition to his writings and research projects, Dr. Oppe has served as the member, chairman and on the directing board for innumerable Sociological associations as well as serving the aged, youth and law enforcement fields with special studies.

Canyon Has Shot At District

After sweeping a doubleheader at Dumas last Tuesday, the Canyon High School baseball team is in the running for the district crown.

In the first game at Dumas, the Eagles won 2-1 behind Ronnie Hickman's two-hitter. There were no Canyon errors during the game.

The Eagles of Coach Bob Sloan blasted the Demons in the second game 13-3. Home runs were hit by Jimmy Ward and Mat Madewell. Joe Luquette's efforts at the plate netted him two doubles in the contest.

The two wins have left Canyon with a district record of 4-2.

Tuesday, the team will travel to Levelland for the last two district games of the season. The Eagles are in a do-or-die situation. They must win both games of the doubleheader to keep their district championship hopes alive. Levelland is undefeated in conference play with six wins. The two Canyon losses came from the bats of Lavelland.

If the Eagles win, both games, a one-game playoff will result.

According to Sloan, the two previous wins over Dumas has bolstered the team spirit. "I think we have an excellent chance of winning district," he said.

Famous Director Speaks Here

Joshua Logan served as artist-in-residence for theatre students at West Texas State University Friday and Saturday of this week and earned for himself another "Pulitzer Prize" from the students with their interest.

On Friday, Logan met with advanced acting classes on the campus and held conferences with students before making a public lecture at the Branding Iron Theatre that evening.

Logan is best known as the director of motion pictures, Broadway hits and co-author for the hits "South Pacific," "Mister Roberts" and "Fanny." His most recent screen production was "Camelot."

University students were filled with questions as Logan appeared in campus discussions Friday afternoon at the Intimate Theatre of the FAB. They listened attentively to his answers to such questions as "what was it like working with Marlon Brando?" To which Logan said "confusing" and went on to explain that Brando has "a genius for adapting himself to become the character whom he is to play."

As Logan continued speaking about famous movie, stage and other acting personalities the audience joined his feelings of knowing and appreciating those with whom he works.

"When you get a good performance feeling from 1000 theatre goers you can bet that 20,000 will hear about it — and when you get a bad performance feeling from the audience, it is time to rewrite or discard the material being played," he related as he told of writing in an additional 53 pages of script during a single weekend.

He spoke in-depth about the theater and movie versions of "Picnic" and other movies such as "Bus Stop" which starred the late Marilyn Monroe, "Sayonara" which featured Marlon Brando in the lead role and "Mister Roberts" starring Henry Fonda.

Logan was welcomed to the campus Thursday evening with a reception by the Friends of the Fine Arts and the WTSU Speech Faculty with Ray C. Johnson, president, giving the welcome. Saturday evening, May 3, Logan acted as the master of ceremonies for the Department of Speech and Theatre's annual BIT Awards Night activities.

Senior Citizens Corner

Windy Miller

Starting today, The Sunday News will be featuring members of the Canyon Senior Citizens Association.

This week's senior citizen is W.E. (Windy) Miller.

Windy has been a resident of Canyon since 1926. As an employee of the U.S. Postal Service, he retired in 1966 after serving 40 years and five months for the Canyon Post Office.

The Canyon Senior Citizens Association received their official charter on Oct. 15, 1974. Windy is the treasurer of the group.

Commenting on the senior citizens group in Canyon, he said, "It helps us to stay young in spirit while our bodies grow old."

The Canyon Senior Citizens Association, according to Windy, is not only for retired persons, but for those who have reached that senior age.

Besides working with the senior citizens group, Windy spends his time in his garden and an occasional game of dominoes.
